Column One BY David Courtney

I have often thought that it might be a good idea for newspapermen to have a column of their own. The London newspapermen have done this for some time, and it has been a success. It has given them a chance to express their views on the news of the day, and it has been a valuable addition to the paper.

A few public-spirited men came to the rescue of the newspapermen. They saw that the newspapermen were in a difficult position, and they decided to help them. They gave them a column of their own, and they have been a great help to them.

Obviously no final opinion on the public habit or the usefulness of the column can be pronounced on the basis of a three weeks' strike during which the national newspapers of Britain have been unable to appear. It is surprising, however, and to some extent illuminating, that fifty million readers should have been deprived of their daily papers without anybody except the newspaper proprietors getting really excited about it. Government has done nothing to offer its mediocrity leadership. Although the trade union leadership which called the strike has the reputation of being extremist and not popular, the T.U.C. Transport House has done and said little about it. Public agitation has been as good as none, in fact, no newspaper has bothered much about it.

The British are, of course, an easy-going people. They take their strikes as they come, and can go without their newspapers as complacently as they have been in the habit of taking what their newspapers give them. Perhaps, then, when the newspapers reappear fifty million people will read them again and decide that the morning paper at breakfast and the afternoon paper in the bus or underground are as necessary to the intelligent democratic way of life as the House of Commons. Those who write for the papers and would not know what to do with the ploughshares and pruning hooks into which our typewriters and fountain pens should, no doubt, be beaten, must fervently hope so.

Burns Sends Off Report on Gaza Incidents to UN

Jerusalem Press Staff.
The Chief of Staff of the U.N. Truce Supervision Organization, General E.L.M. Burns, on Wednesday night cabled a report to the Security Council listing all incidents along the border of the Gaza Strip from February 28, when the Gaza garrison's camp was attacked up to the Nahal Oz incident on April 3.

According to the U.N. spokesman the report was purely informative and did not include recommendations. It covered 25 Israeli and 49 Egyptian complaints, and would be released simultaneously in New York and Jerusalem. It summarized the U.N. decisions on the most serious incidents which were dealt with at emergency meetings, while only mentioning the other complaints which did not call for emergency meetings and included instances of over-drying and similar Egyptian allegations.

The spokesman also stated that General Burns was at present considering the Egyptian offer that U.N. observers be stationed at certain fixed positions inside Egyptian-held territory in the Gaza Strip. He stressed that no decision had been taken on this issue.

WEST CONFERRING UNITED NATIONS, Thursday

(U.N.A.).—Steps were understood to have been taken by the Security Council delegations of the Western Big Three to meet and attempt to decide on a common course of action before the Council meets on Wednesday.

Observers report that there is a strong desire to avoid further Israeli-Egyptian bickering in the Council and to get both sides to agree to some more peaceful formulation before the Council meets on Wednesday.

Mr. Dag Hammarskjöld has spoken to both the Israeli delegate, Mr. Abba Eban, and the Egyptian representative, Omar Lotfi.

EBAN SEES DULLES WASHINGTON, Thursday (U.P.)

Mr. Abba Eban, called on Secretary of State Dulles yesterday and conferred with him for 30 minutes. The Secretary General, Mr. Dag Hammarskjöld, the meeting represented a continuation of Mr. Eban's talks at the Department of State with regard to Israel's security position and to recent developments in the Middle East.

Another Israeli patrol traveling along the border encountered a Jordanian flock grazing in Israeli territory south of Eilat, in the vicinity of Afula. The patrol, which returned the flock, suffered no casualties and continued on its way.

The Jordanian patrol suffered no casualties. A complaint was lodged on the incident with the Israeli-Jordan M.A.C. It is understood that fire from the Jordan side continued when the U.N. observers arrived for the investigation this afternoon. The National Guard was alerted only after fire was returned by Israeli forces.

Infiltrators at Moshav. Three infiltrators attempted to enter a moshav in the Shefela area on Wednesday night and were met by shots from the settlement watchmen. They escaped into the darkness, leaving traces which led to the Jordan border.

IRACI M.P.'S TO TURKEY BAGHDAD, Thursday (U.P.).—Twenty-one Iraqi Deputies and Senators left here today by air for Ankara where they are to be guests for five days of the Turkish Government. The delegation is led by Abdul Wahab Mirjan, President of the Chamber of Deputies.

Crisis Looms In Syria Over Pact, Cairo Envoy

Syria is facing a fresh government crisis, and the fate of Sabri al-Ahmed's Cabinet is expected to be decided within 48 hours, according to an Arab News Agency report yesterday. The outcome is expected to be either the resignation of the Government or of the President.

Two causes of the crisis are President Hashem al-Atassi's disapproval of Syria's joining the Egyptian-Saudi Arabian pact—a step reported to have been approved by the Cabinet on Wednesday—and his refusal to sign a decree appointing Ahmad Shukeiry as Ambassador to Cairo.

The Damascus newspaper "El Rai al Aam" today published a report attributed to Philip Taha, former Lebanese Foreign Minister, who said he was quoted in a statement by the President of the Cabinet in Beirut, Naccache, who has just returned from Syria, is said to have reported that President al-Atassi frankly told him of his opposition to the Egyptian-Saudi Arabian pact.

He quoted the Syrian President as saying: "I advised Premier al-Ahmed to postpone signing the pact, but in vain. That is why I am looking for the right opportunity to resign."

Shukeiry's Status. The dispute over Syria's envoy to Cairo arose from the appointment of Shukeiry, a born lawyer and a refugee who is the Assistant Secretary-General of the Arab League. President al-Atassi, which is strongly opposed by the Egyptian-Saudi Arabian pact, is said to have been in the country for 10 successive years.

The Cabinet thereupon called an emergency session of Parliament to approve a constitutional amendment, which it did on Wednesday night. The President, however, has appealed to the Supreme Court for a ruling on the matter.

Reports that the Cabinet on Wednesday approved Syrian participation in the Egyptian-Saudi Arabian pact said it did so with a number of reservations. One of these was the introduction of an amendment which would permit a member of this pact to join also the Anglo-Turkish alliance, which is strongly opposed by both Egypt and Saudi Arabia.

W.H.O. Warning. A press release by the U.N. World Health Organization in Geneva warned today that infantile paralysis "is not yet beaten."

The W.H.O. described the history of the disease and the attempts to combat it, expressing doubts that polio has been definitely conquered, and added: "According to press reports from Ann Arbor, Michigan, a poliomyelitis vaccine has been shown to be safe and reasonably effective in a field trial on American school children. The advantage of the vaccination over the long effects of the vaccine is about three and a half to one."

"But poliomyelitis is not yet beaten. We do not know if it will work on infants, we do not know if it is effective under other conditions than those in which it was tested, we do not know how best to use it."

"Other vaccines prepared by other methods are being investigated. We do not know which will eventually prove the best, but the work goes on, and we have found reason to believe that poliomyelitis will be beaten within a few years."

Hitch in Polio Vaccine Shipment to Israel. Dr. A. Bish, the Director-General of the Ministry of Health, left last night by air for New York in connection with the shipment of polio vaccine from the U.S. to this country.

The Minister of Health had announced earlier in the month that Israel would receive a shipment of polio vaccine from the U.S. of the type successfully tried out in that country during the past year.

Obstacles have since arisen in obtaining an export license and Dr. Bish has gone to expedite the shipment as timing is an essential factor in the immunization campaign. In the meantime, the Ministry is going ahead with preparations for the inoculations which will be carried out immediately upon the receipt of the vaccine.

Dr. Bish will also attend the Conference of the World Health Organization to be held in Mexico City during the first week in May.

Argentina Bans Catholic Religion From Schools

Buenos Aires, Thursday. — The Government decided today that the teaching of Roman Catholic religion must be suspended in all public schools.

The decree stated that the suspension would be "temporary" and that it applied to the teaching of ethics to non-Catholics.

It was the latest development in the six-month-old controversy between the Government and the Roman Catholic Church.

In another development, Mr. Antonio Cafiero, a militant Catholic, resigned as Minister of Commerce in President Peron's cabinet.

Relations between Church and State in Argentina have been clouded since President Peron charged in November last year that some sections of the Church were interfering in government affairs.

Members of the Constituent Assembly believe the Government intends shortly to introduce constitutional reforms designed to separate Church and State. At present the State officially "supports" Catholicism and the President must be a Catholic.

The feud has resulted in clashes between Catholic followers and police, a purge of Catholics from public posts, cuts in subsidies for Church schools, revision of marriage laws to allow easier divorce and the banning of some Catholic meetings.

CYPRUS ARAB REFUGEES ASK BRITISH PAPERS. By IRIS K. RUSSELL. Jerusalem Post Correspondent.

Nicosia, Thursday. — Nearly 400 Palestine Arab refugees who have been living in Cyprus since early in 1949 today sent a petition to the Cyprus Governor, Sir Robert Armitage, asking to be considered as British subjects.

In their petition the refugees said that over the past seven years they had applied several times to the Arab governments and the Arab League pleading to be admitted into any Arab country.

The petitioners told the Governor that they were under a definite status but that their appeals had not even been acknowledged.

USSR, Austria Agree On State Treaty as Talks End

French Pressing For Early Big 4 Talks. PARIS, Thursday. — Premier Edgar Faure called in the American and British envoys today to press the preparations for a Western Big Four meeting and later Big Four meeting with Russia.

The meeting came amid increasingly optimistic reports here that the trip of the Austrian Chancellor, Dr. Julius Raab, to Moscow might lead to the long-awaited Austrian peace treaty — the first evidence of concurrence which opens here on Monday. Strict security measures are being taken throughout this famed summer resort.

Prime Ministers Chou En-lai of China, Nehru of India and U Nu of Burma, and delegates from Japan, North Vietnam and the Sudan are among those due to arrive on Saturday.

Today's arrivals included the Jordan and Laos delegations, senior officials of the Gold Coast, Ceylon and Turkish delegations, and unofficial observers from the Austrian Labour Party and the Tunisian nationalists.

China has urged the Indonesian Government to keep sharp watch against further conspiratorial acts by subversive forces. The Chinese Ambassador, Hsueh Chen, called on Dr. Ali Sastroamidjojo, the Prime Minister, to tell him the Chinese Government regarded the crash of the Air India Constellation on Monday as a "serious incident" and "sabotage by the enemies of peace."

In London yesterday, the Foreign Office announced that Britain has protested to China against the latter's claim that Britain bears responsibility for the plane crash in which eight Chinese delegates to the conference were killed. It was in reply to a Chinese protest against lack of security measures by the British authorities in Hong Kong, from where the plane took off for Indonesia.

Meanwhile, Mr. Chou En-lai arrived in London today on his way home. He was personally welcomed at the airport by Prime Minister U Nu.

Rebel Troops Reimpose Blockade on Saigon. SAIGON, Thursday (U.P.). — Rebel forces reimposed a blockade on Saigon today, forcing the French Government to declare a state of emergency in the Aures and Kabylie regions.

The blockade was imposed by 25 soldiers of whom 15, including the French sergeant in command, escaped but lost all their weapons. According to some reports the rebels even got a heavy machinegun which was mounted on the back of one of the trucks, but officials doubted that they could have detached it from its base.

The troops of the religious sects launched a series of attacks at dawn against posts manned by the national army prior to reimposing the blockade.

Sporadic bitter fighting flared up in the south-west, largely controlled by disident troops. Units of the Hoa Hao sect looted heavy mortar shells into the little town of Sadec, 90 kms. south-west of Saigon. The rebels fired when loyalist units counter-attacked, but shortly afterwards ambushed a government battalion 45 kms south of Sadec and killed the commanding officer.

Wages Aren't Just MONEY. The leaders of Mapam, Maki and Abud Ha'Avoda are trying to convince the worker that it is they who are willing and able to raise the worker's wages. Let's look at the facts.

Every working man possessed of common sense knows that: — Raising wages without increased production means: — lowering the buying power of money; a general rise in the price of goods; galloping inflation.

Raising nominal wages, without increased production, means: A lowering of actual wages. This is the way to raise the worker's real income: — Determining the cost-of-living increase on the basis of the cost-of-living index; Raising productivity and output by increased efficiency; By seniority, family, and professional training increases.

This is the way of the Israel Labour Party—Mapai towards raising the worker's income. In this way we have maintained up till now the wage-level and have even raised it. In this way we shall continue to advance. For a united Histadrut which carries out what it promises — part in the trade union activities of the Labour Federation but does not belong to it, owing to the reluctance of both parties, which naturally do not see eye-to-eye on many issues.

Party Profiles: Poalei Agudat Yisrael

The leaders of Poalei Agudat Yisrael point with obvious pride to their participation in all the activities which were bound up with the founding of the State. They took part in organizing illegal immigration: they stress that there were more than 600 members of Poalei Agudat Yisrael aboard the famous Exodus 1947 which fought the British blockade. They sent emissaries to Europe's refugee camps, as did all the other workers' parties. They were in the Hagana

The organization became independent of Agudat Yisrael in 1946, when it held its first world congress in Antwerp. The movement has its own newspaper, "Ha-Yehudim," and a children's paper. It has its own youth organization and its own section in Nahal; it sends people to Europe and to the United States to recruit new recruits and work among the immigrants in the ma'abarot.

Dr. Kalman Kahane, resembles many other members of the Likud in that he lives in an agricultural settlement.

While obviously proud of the achievements which liken them to other labour parties, the leaders of Poalei Agudat Yisrael are at pains to point out that they, too, have a social conscience. Ze'ev Werner of Tiberias. This is of as much importance to the members of Poalei Agudat Yisrael as Hafeetz Haim. For them, it is proof that they have not left the base of the general movement and religious leadership.

twice the parent organization as the labour wing. While the latter stresses the need for more aggressive action, the former is inclined to cling to the ideal of the Yeshiva Bocher, the man who devotes all his life to religious study. While the parent body does not fire off pointed letters, the labour wing has not happened here lately. The victorious war the establishment of the State and mass immigration were crises which the Yeshiva Bocher of the Aishley, Feidel Agud, Yisrael points to the necessity realizing God's intention by human effort and God explains its purpose in the world. The Yeshiva Bocher of the Aishley, Feidel Agud, Yisrael points to the necessity realizing God's intention by human effort and God explains its purpose in the world. The Yeshiva Bocher of the Aishley, Feidel Agud, Yisrael points to the necessity realizing God's intention by human effort and God explains its purpose in the world.

The difference is, in fact, very deep though it might appear academic to many outside Israel. But it must be remembered that the thinking of Agudat Yisrael is still along scholastic lines, that the members of both factions come from the same circles, that 90 per cent of its children of Polesi Agudat Yisrael attend the separate schools of the Polesi Yeshiva, and that and allegiance to the two parties often cuts right through families. How deep the differences go was demonstrated this year, when Polesi Agudat Yisrael did not attend the Knesset

Both sides are anxious to stress the differences, Knesset Member from Agudat Yisrael pointing out that himself belonged to the labor branch and did manual work when he first came to this country. For a party like Agudat Yisrael, however, opposed as it is to every change, the very fact that its offspring move with the stream which leads to work on the land and trade

Ruth Tsarfati-Sternshush has two amusing and lively female studies and among the Knesset works, the Portrait (artificial stone) is an impressive piece of work.

Zvi Shorr
ALSO at the Tel Aviv Museum is a collection of oil by Zvi Shorr, the first one-man exhibition he has held for a long time. Most of the works are landscapes executed in a naturalistic manner. All the artist's work is quiet in spirit and even if the subject is a Tel Aviv street scene, he imbues it with a village atmosphere. An obvious love for the scenes he paints gives them a certain quality.

RECENTLY back from a stay of several months in Paris, Aharon Giliadi is now having an exhibition at the Chmerinack Gallery, Tel Aviv. A number of the paintings have already been on view. There are included, however, a series of watercolours of the Luxembourg Gardens and a sketch of the Seine. With very economical means, he creates some pleasantly atmospheric scenes; the Seine sketch, only a few liquid touches on the white paper, is particularly effective.

The newer oils, like the old, are all rather scruffy in mood, and heavily painted, as if the artist were bold statements and monumental quality give them a certain distinction.

Mixed Bag

THE Katz Gallery shows paintings by Arteli, Okahi, Pakeia, and Fein — not a particularly good selection. The Arteli work on view at the Museum are far superior as are the Okahi's. The Fein works are pleasant in colour and vision, but lack the bold statements. The Pakeia paintings — oil on cardboard — are of the type he occasionally reverts to: on a light background he imposes oblong shapes filled with a colourful design, and he has a lively and charming sense of colour. S. W.

East was dealer, neither as vulnerable. All Souths became declarers at a part-score contract in clubs, with the exception of one table. Hays the show was on the other foot.

This particular East made rather dubious effort to start the initiative with a sub-stan-ard one club opening bid. North doubt and proud of his points.
South was promptly rebuffed.

World Cheers Success Salk Vaccine

By a Special Correspondent

THE tenth anniversary of the death of polio's most famed victim, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, was marked by the publication of a report on the success of the U.S. anti-polio vaccine. As the U.S. Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare licensed the vaccine for general use immediately after the announcement of its effectiveness. It was not clear how soon it would be available for export.

Nine million dollars worth of the vaccine had been stockpiled by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, but the manufacturing firms had not yet begun to give out instructions as to where to go to get the free vaccine. The first commercial shipments of the vaccine are expected to start soon.

At the University of Michigan, 10 million facts yielded by last year's nationwide tests were recorded on IBM punch cards and no individual worker knew the answer until the Chief Evaluator, Dr. Thomas Francis Jr., gave the word to run all the cards through the machine. But there had been so much evidence of the effectiveness of the vaccine, that the six pharmaceutical firms engaged in making the vaccine had gone ahead to produce the quantities necessary to do a full scale vaccination series immediately the results were known.

The World Health Organization at the United Nations in New York saluted the report of the Salk Vaccine as an extremely encouraging but stated it will continue the research in its chain of Regional Polio Laboratories throughout the world.

The Geneva Headquarters of the W.H.O., United Nations specialized Agency, pointed out that many remained to be learned about the nature and duration of the protection conferred on vaccinated persons, and also about the way in which the new vaccine can be used.

But a W.H.O. announcement said that the new vaccine had proved to be 90 per cent effective as "subject to confirmation, extremely effective."

W.H.O. is gradually building a worldwide string of Polio Laboratories which will be increased as nations as facilities are made available. One of the main tasks will be to study and identify various polio viruses, isolated from different areas, as well as other viruses responsible for similar diseases.

Public Health officials in Britain and France warned that although the Salk vaccine had proved successful in the United States, it could be no guarantee of its success elsewhere, where there is a different strain of polio virus.

Dutch Face Civil Versus Religious Marriage Problem

By Maurice Deag

UNTIL a week ago, the question of civil or religious marriage never was a problem in Holland, at least not during the century and more that the present Civil Code has been in force. Any couple wishing to marry must go to the municipal Registrar's Office, after which they are free to have the marriage consecrated by a minister of the church, or to have the ceremony performed by a civil official. The minister performing the marriage must certify that the couple is in possession of a civil marriage certificate, and is liable to punishment if the couple has not been civilly married.

However, one of the more serious Dutch dailies, "Het Parool," has disclosed that a 50-year-old accountant married on January 28 in a Catholic chapel in Haarlem is still legally married to another woman.

Further disclosures were even more startling, as they showed that the priest who had married the couple was not only ignorant, but must have been fully aware of the situation and had acted with the connivance of his superior, including the Bishop of Haarlem.

About 30 years ago, the accountant who at that time was a non-Catholic, had contracted a civil marriage with a Catholic. Eight years ago they were divorced, but after some time, remarried. The husband again left his wife, and wanted to marry his Catholic secretary. This time, the wife refused to divorce, and the husband was forced to remain married to her. Meanwhile, the husband had become a Catholic.

Last December, the wife received a letter from the Episcopal Vicar, asking her on behalf of the Bishop to agree to a divorce and inform her that the Bishop considered her marriage invalid in any case. A fascicle of this letter was published by "Het Parool." The wife still refused, but the husband nevertheless had his second marriage consecrated, and the young couple are now the proud parents of their marriage.

Noodles Taste Extra Good Now

By Molly Lyons Bar-Devid

THE goodness of bread is perhaps one of the past-Passover lessons; after only a week of doing without how one relishes a freshly baked crust! The same is true of the star-Passover-forbidden fruits; how tasty, for instance, is a dish of macaroni? And how delicious after the Passover splurge, the economy of noodles is something to consider in this month's menu.

The other day I visited the Osem Macaroni Factory at Be'er Sheva. Macaroni is the Hagada legend. It was made by Joseph to do the factory tour. White-garbed girls handle the little that must be handled in vermicelli packaging. For the rest, the product is automatic, and the product one gets is never touched by human hands. The aroma of roasting farfel, drying spaghetti, and dough being mixed in giant vats was all too tantalizing. The director, who hails from Caschodovsk, Germany and Russia, has been brought to Israel three score years of tradition in macaroni making; they have a noodle shape for every year, made from different pastas. You can have anything from flowers to cocks-comb shapes, say pattern made in Italy or the U.S. The fresh Shearman, housewives call the cockers-comb noodles pot and Moroccan Israelis have doubled the round, rice-shaped macaroni "Osem Quorn." Anyway as a result of that visit I've had a noodle-making jig, and here are some of the exciting one-plate dinners you might like to copy.

Chinese Noodles Israel Style

The dish from which this is copied is called "Chow Mein" but in Israel we have to improvise for some of the ingredients. We have no soy sauce here, but if you mix equal quantities of Soy Seasoning with some condensed such as Worcestershire Sauce or even ketchup, you get quite a pleasant substitute. We have no water chestnuts or bamboo shoots, but celery root and onion slices are good instead. The result isn't exactly what you get in China, but it's a relative of the original and mighty good too! 1 pkg. egg noodles, 1 celery root, 3 large onions, sliced, 1 cup celery stalks, sliced, 1/2 cup carrots, sliced, 1/2 cup of two green onions, 1 egg beaten, 1 tbsp. soy sauce (or combination of Soy Seasoning and Worcestershire sauce or ketchup), 1 tsp. oil, 1 cup stock or water, 1 tsp. cornstarch, 1 tsp. salt.

Cut celery root, celery and onions into slices. Cut meat or chicken into strips of same size or shorter. Fry eggs in oil pan and set aside. Add meat or chicken to oil pan. Sprinkle with a tablespoon of oil over the noodles, place on a rack or in colander, drain, and add the vegetables and onion slices. Sprinkle with a tablespoon of oil over the noodles, place on a rack or in colander, drain, and add the vegetables and onion slices. Sprinkle with a tablespoon of oil over the noodles, place on a rack or in colander, drain, and add the vegetables and onion slices.

Scalloped Noodles and Potatoes

I opened a tin of what I thought was going to be stewed plums the other day, and it turned out to be stewed prunes. The following recipe was the result. You can use any fruit you want, of course. If you get strawberries at a bargain, because they are near the over-ripe stage, you'll find them very good in this dish.

1 pkg. Broad noodles, 1 cup sliced prunes or other fruit, 1/2 cup butter, 1 cup buttered bread crumbs, Sugar and cinnamon, for lemon rind (if you like). Boil and drain noodles in a colander. Pour cold water over and drain again. Sprinkle a little sugar and cinnamon over the prunes. Grate a wedge of butter

FIRE WORKS PLEASE

I MUST say I quite agree with Mrs. Esther Eliazberg that Independence Day should not be celebrated as a Festival of the Family, but not out of pity for the harassed housewife — we shall have to prepare a meal anyway. No, what makes me object is that now even our national holiday is to be dragged down to the question of eating. It is bad enough that every single one of our religious holidays has such a set of traditional dishes connected with it, and adhered to with such pious ardour even by people who never open a prayerbook all their lives.

But now, when starting a new tradition for our national holiday, let us keep our tummies out of it for once! Is it really necessary to eat Kugelach in memory of the Arabs got into a Jewish house and thousands of our Jewish boys gave their lives to defend this? There are many possibilities more dignified and worthy to commemorate our great day: a symbolic dance performed by our young people, an Independence Hymn, or an Independence Play, fire works, to name only some — anything but ordinary pleasures to express our patriotic feelings!

VOLUNTEERS PARADE

I have read Hadassah Ben Haim's lines in your issue of April 1 and would like to tell her and all the other service-men and women how surprised I was that they stayed away — especially those who joined up here and served with the Palestinian units.

I would like to know whether it was because of pride or shyness. I myself would not call it modesty. I think that ignoring this gathering means more showing off than taking part in it. There were about 10,000, whereas at other times of the day, few come to the parade. Do they not realize that it was meant to be more than a reunion this time?

The Art of Relaxation

HAVE you ever looked at a kitten sleeping in the sun? Have you noticed how wonderfully relaxed it is? The Yoga of India knew that and recommended that one study the movements of a cat in order to master the great art of relaxation.

In New York, the well-known

Elizabeth Arden, understanding the importance to beauty of relaxing nervous tension, has opened special classes in relaxation. She has her pupils imitate the movements of a cat at play and rest.

Relaxation is the absence of tension and effort — so when you feel tense and overwrought, lie down flat, stretch as far as you can and then roll over on your back, repeating your body "I am relaxed, I am relaxed, I am relaxed."

This period of relaxation need not be long for you to derive the maximum benefit. It is a basic law of nature that the more you relax, the stronger you become. It is only worry, wasted energy, tension and emotional upsets that produce the harmful effects of a life of stress and strain.

Remember a tense muscle is a working muscle, and even the most beautiful face can be marred through tension and strain. The plain face looks attractive when relaxed; frowns stop and smiles come easily.

WIZO CLUB IN TIVON

WIZO's newest club building has been opened in Tivon, about half an hour from Haifa. The beautifully built club houses decorated three-room club houses, which will accommodate all Wizo members in the vicinity, but serves as a focus for general community activities as well.

Special activities are being planned for the holiday months, when visitors to Tivon, previously thrown on their own resources, will be able to see and hear from the Wizo members. TAKING THE CURE

By Martha Guthmann

WHEN my doctor told me to try and dip my pains in a mineral water of Tibers, it was to Kapat Haim's Winter Recreation Home at Migdal, the traditional site of Mary Magdalene's village, that I had gone for my cure. Workers from all over the country come down here in 14-day relays for medical care and recreation before the summer season begins. The atmosphere is one of peace and relaxation, and the food is excellent. The medical service is complete the cure.

Being a Migdal convalescent is a full-time job and more. In the early morning, one queues for tickets to the Hot Springs, and at 10:30, among much rush and excitement (quite unnecessary but pleasant) two buses leave, filled to capacity. Eleven is the crucial hour for the bathing establishments. Migdal inmates invade the place bearing a variety of ailments: rheumatism, an hour later, their thirst for mineral water quenched, they reappear happy and perspiring, strapped up to the tips of their noses to board the home-bound buses.

Earnestness of Life

After a compulsory two-hour afternoon nap, the convalescents are again faced with the earnestness of life. For some there are injections, for others a massage. Adherents of the electrical treatments gather in the medical cabinet to have their muscles treated by a heart-to-heart talk about their respective ailments which is of course excellent emotional therapy. Last, but not least, there are those mud-pack baths taken in the basement of the building, which seem to be the most hilarious affair in the world.

If you happen to have an afternoon off (and on Saturday) you may avail yourself of the lovely and instructive bus trips organized by the management to Ge-

Ceramics For The Many

By Paul Kohn

A pleasant cottage in wooden Kiryat Ansh houses the local council's School of Ceramics, now three months old. Over 60 local residents and members of kibbutzim and moshavim in the Jezreel Valley drop in twice weekly to thumb mould and bake their inspirations into ceramic form.

It all started very simply. Miss Edith Galosh, a veteran Vienna-trained ceramist, got the cottage from the local council. There were 15 pupils at the start, but they quickly began to enjoy themselves, and in a few days the number had reached 60. Ladies brought their husbands and daughters, children their grandmothers. Dr. Aliza Blumenthal has seen more than six times as many summer as 11-year-old Ronnie, the daughter of the Council's secretary, who sits at the same round table with her.

Nearby Site

At first, the school's raw material came from Nazareth, but it has been discovered that the clay soil of the nearby Beit Shearim excavation site suits pottery work eminently. A donkey-cart brings it to the cottage, where it is turned into pots, plates, candleholders, necklaces, statuettes lampshades and so forth — all by people who two months ago had as best "messed about" once with putty or plaster. Wisely, Miss Galosh has not sold any of the school's products, but rather has given them away, and according to Miss Galosh, "exceptional talent."

Running Costs Low

The cost of running the Kiryat Ansh Ceramic School is next to nothing. With a little help, simple classes could spring up almost anywhere. Suitable clay can be found in many parts of the country, and everyone can shape something with his hands. The satisfaction of having made even the simplest thing is of tremendous educational value, particularly to those who least expect to be creative. The school's work of art are not mass produced, and it is not a touch of the individual that attracts.

And it need not cost there. Italian ceramic earnings, very simple, just large and brightly coloured, are now sweeping the world. The plain face looks attractive when relaxed; frowns stop and smiles come easily.

Royal Stimulus For London Dress Trade

By Allison Settle

WORLD interest in the wholesale dressmaking trade of London has greatly increased since it has been realized that the younger members of the Royal Family, though dressing mainly with England's great couturier makers, in their wardrobes many models made by the "wholesale couture," that is, the leading members of the dress manufacturing world.

One of these firms, from whom Princess Margaret in the past few days has ordered half a dozen high summer dresses, now has requests from so many ladies around the Court, asking for the privilege of buying direct from the couturier, that it has had to set up a small private dressmaking establishment off Bond Street to which such would-be customers are directed.

Here, the firm's designs can be copied in the made-to-measure manner which is quite outside the work of such a firm. To make to measure for members of the Royal Family is a great honour, but to do this for the public is a different matter. The firm's designs can be copied in the made-to-measure manner which is quite outside the work of such a firm. To make to measure for members of the Royal Family is a great honour, but to do this for the public is a different matter.

Royal Favourites Shared

Royal favours are shared out between half a dozen of the leading couturiers, some of whom design their own models, others buy fabric to copy or adapt, while others are American-inspired. Fabrics used by London wholesale houses are from the same haute couture sources as those used by the couturiers. Among them are the likes of John Galiano, Jacques Fath, Christian Dior, and so forth.

At first, the school's raw material came from Nazareth, but it has been discovered that the clay soil of the nearby Beit Shearim excavation site suits pottery work eminently. A donkey-cart brings it to the cottage, where it is turned into pots, plates, candleholders, necklaces, statuettes lampshades and so forth — all by people who two months ago had as best "messed about" once with putty or plaster. Wisely, Miss Galosh has not sold any of the school's products, but rather has given them away, and according to Miss Galosh, "exceptional talent."

garden notes OKRA — HANDSOME TROPICAL PLANT

THE okra, or Solanum esculentum, is a handsome tropical plant of the mallow family, cultivated for its immature pods. Used in soups, stews, and salads, these pods are best grown at home for they spoil easily by the time they get to market. They are beaked and ribbed, 10 to 20 centimetres long and two to three centimetres wide when mature, but tender enough to be eaten only when they are four to five centimetres long.

Okra is generally grown as an annual, but where the cold is not too severe it can live on for years, especially if it is covered with straw in the winter. It will do well in any good garden soil but needs a sunny place. It is quite decorative in its own right, and it will make an attractive garden background if sown in a single row in a small border.

The seeds take two to three weeks to germinate, and the plants should be thinned out when they are six to eight centimetres tall, leaving only one plant to a foot and taking care not to injure the roots. The crop takes two or three months to reach the edible stage, at which time the pods should immediately be picked. To induce a rich crop only those pods that are wanted for next year's seeds (or as a substitute for coffee) should be left on the plant to mature.

Okra can be preserved either by canning or by stringing the pods up to dry, whole or in slices.

MATZOY GOOD THIS YEAR

The quality of matzo was generally satisfactory this year and the Ministry of Commerce and Industry found it necessary to issue warnings to only two bakeries. The Ministry spokesman said yesterday. They were "Mazot 20" in Haifa and Goren in Safed.

Only 1,650 tons of matzo were used this year, as compared with 2,250 tons last year.

'Limited Settlement May Grow Into Peace'—M.P.

"The most immediate problem facing Israel and the nations bordering states is border security," Mr. Arthur Henderson, Labour M.P. and former Secretary of State for Air, told a press conference at the King David Hotel in Jerusalem yesterday on the eve of his return to Britain after a short visit as the guest of the Government.

"You cannot obtain peace without the conditions to make peace enduring. On the other hand peace might well grow out of a limited settlement," Mr. Henderson added. He also stated that to his mind the property of the Middle East depended to a very large extent on irrigation schemes which would also go a far way towards settling the Arab refugee problem.

He stressed that he did not object to Britain joining the Arab-Israeli pact, but felt that it was equally necessary to safeguard any other country—such as Israel—with whom Britain had friendly relations.

This is Mr. Henderson's second visit to Israel. He was the first British Minister to visit Israel in 1950 at a time when Britain had not yet accorded de jure recognition to the Jewish State.

Over Million Voters Listed

JERUSALEM, Thursday. — One million and fifty thousand people will be able to check their names in the General Election Voters' Lists now on view in the country. From today, 10 days, as laid down in the Election Law.

Further details of pre-election procedure were given at a press conference of the Central Election Committee by its Chairman, Justice Dr. S. Agranat, here today. The country has been divided into 14 election zones, each with its own committee appointed to assure maximum voting, supervise polling counts, and to report back to the central committee. They will also set up the 2,000 polling committees for election day.

The eligible voter who does not find his name in the lists, will be able to fill out an application form no later than May 12.

Those who have changed their address without notifying the authorities, and find their old address in the list, will have to apply for a transfer, otherwise they will have to vote at their previous location. The Ministry of the Interior must reply by June 3, and as a further safeguard, an appeal may be lodged with the District Court by June 12.

Mr. M. Eliaz, National Election Controller, said that the recent mailing of personal notices to voters was a unique operation, unprecedented in any other country. Nine hundred thousand were received, while the rest of the 150,000 were returned owing to changes of address. So far, 42,000 people had notified the Ministry of the Interior of their not receiving the notice, he said.

Justice Agranat explained the election procedure over Kol Yisrael this evening.

Mr. Eliaz also plans to visit Uruguay, Brazil, and the U.S., where he will deal with the inter-organized Bond Organisation. He is expected to return in three weeks.

Parents Get Greater Voice in Schools

Parents are to have a stronger voice in elementary school affairs according to a new list of regulations recently issued by the Ministry of Education and Culture.

The regulations stipulate that every school having eight classes must include one parent representative; two representatives are allowed in schools with more than 24 classes; three for schools having from 16 to 24 classes and four representatives for every school with more than 24 classes.

Among the functions of the Parental Council are the selection of terms and auxiliary books for school use and the discussion of specific student problems.

The regulations recommend a visit by the grade supervisor to the parents' homes at least once a year and require a parent-teacher meeting at least twice a year. The Ministry of Education is also planning to publish a booklet for parents on the subject of school discipline.

A specific budgeting of home-work time for each subject must be made by the grade supervisor, according to the regulations.

Father Drinks, Dices Gambles, Says Son

"My father is a confirmed drunkard. He plays cards and dices continuously. Now he is taking to support him so he can continue to play and drink," according to a statement which the son submitted to the Jerusalem District Court yesterday through his advocate, Mr. A. Dori.

The father, through his attorney, Mr. D. Yanovsky, asked the court to compel the son to pay him IL45 a month since he was sick and could not work. He said that his son, a bachelor, earned more than IL200 a month.

The son also claimed that he supported his sister and that his father had divorced his mother ten years ago, leaving her to support two children alone. (Hic)
